Why choose French?

Department
for Education

- A language is included in the Ebaac (a list of subjects recommended by the Department of Education) and sought after by prestigious universities.

British Chambers of Commerce

- A language gives you a competitive edge in the workplace whatever your level.

What jobs can you get with a language?

Interpreter: Study modern languages up to A-level then find an MFL degree which specialises in interpreting.

Sales executive: After studying languages to GCSE or A-level, take a business, management or marketing course at apprenticeship or degree level.

Diplomatic services officer: Study a foreign language up to degree level then apply to the Diplomatic Service Fast Stream graduate programme.
